ROCKY MOUNTAIN RANGERS

THE ORIGINAL ROCKY MOUNTAIN RANGERS

Captain Stewart's Cowboy Cavalry, from a sketch by Mr. J. D. White. (Canadian Pictorial and Illustrated War News, 1885)

ROCKY MOUNTAIN RANGERS

In the year 1885, during the North-West Rebellion, the Canadian Government authorized the formation of a mounted unit in the eastern foothills of the Rockies southwest of Calgary. Range riders were gathered from a large area centering largely on Macleod and Lethbridge. These riders were formed into a unit, and under command of a Major John Stewart, went into training.

In the same year, under the name of the "Rocky Mountain Rangers," this force passed through Calgary "en route to Battleford.

The "Rangers played an important part in the suppression of the Rebellion. On their return to civil life each member of the force was given a free grant of land by the Canadian Government.

In later years, still under the name "Rocky Mountain Rangers," independent Companies operated as Militia units in the Crowsnest Pass District and through the Kootenays and the Okanagan. At one time Companies were located at Fernie, Cranbrook, Kaslo, Nelson and Rossland—all Interior British Columbia towns.

In 1898 the present unit was officially authorized by Order-in-Council, with headquarters at Kamloops and independent Companies at Revelstoke, Armstrong, Vernon, Kelowna and Penticton. It continued an active militia unit up to the time of the first Great War, when it was mobilized on an overseas basis.

After guarding vulnerable points in Interior British Columbia for a period, it was sent overseas as a unit. In 1914 the boys went overseas under command of Lieutenant-Colonel J. R. Vicars, but later was broken up to provide reinforcements for British Columbia battalions in the earlier Divisions.

In the years from the cessation of hostilities up to the present war, the unit continued active on a peace time basis, training large numbers of men annually. In 1939 they were called up for vulnerable point duty under Lieutenant-Colonel D. O. Vicars, D.S.O. In 1940 the Regiment was mobilized for overseas duty under Lieutenant-Colonel J. E. Wood, V.D. Many of these officers and men are serving with Canadian units in the British Eighth Army. Many more are serving throughout the Canadian Forces.

On the outbreak of the present war, the unit was partially mobilized for the protection of vulnerable points in Central British Columbia. In June, 1940, the unit was fully mobilized on an overseas basis and was detailed to a British Columbia Coast Defence station in October of that year.

Realizing the difficulties of transportation encountered in Coastal areas, the unit started a vigorous training program which included long marches and many bivouacs. The first of the longer marches made by the Rangers was a three hundred mile shuttle march from Kamloops, B.C., to Vancouver in August, 1941. Of this distance, the unit marched one hundred and sixty miles, and was carried one hundred and forty miles by unit transport. The entire move took eighteen days, of which eight were taken up with tactical schemes at various points "en route."

Following up this type of training, the unit has marched as a body a total of four hundred and fifty miles in the course of six unit moves from April, 1942, to June, 1943. Much travelling has been done on foot through the forests of British Columbia during which the problems of supply and transportation "off the beaten track" have been met and solved.

During this period, 1940-43, large contingents were trained and sent overseas as reinforcements. Many of these men are also serving with Canadian units in the British Eighth Army.

The unit badge features the head of the famous Rocky Mountain Bighorn Ram. The unit motto, also found on the badge, "KLOCHE NANITCH," is a Chinook Indian phrase meaning "keep a good lookout"—a constant reminder of duty.
