The Hedrick Family History

Most of the original work contained on this history was done by Henry Ward Hedrick and his cousin Marie Stiegers. They started with an inscription from the family Bible of David Hedrick written when David was 14 years old:

"As I understand, my great-grandfather Hedrick's name was Adam born in Holland or Germany. My great-grandmother Hedrick's name was Anna, born in Germany. She was 104 years old in 1835 and that would make her born in 1731. They were married in Germany or Holland. They landed in the U.S. in the year of 1755 the 9th of July.

"My grandfather Hedrick's name was George, born in the U.S. My grandmother Hedrick's name was Elizabeth, maiden name Snyder born in the U.S. I do not know their birth. They were married in N.C.

"My father's name was Adam born in Rowan Co., N.C. Aug. 22, 1797. My mother's name was Susannah Lopp, born Feb. 25, 1799. They were married 1821 Jan. 25.

"Father died Nov. 6, 1854. Mother died Oct. 31, 1860."

David's Bible was destroyed in a fire during the 1930s. The information contained in the following pages is well documented One can only assume David misunderstood or confused information. His 1755 date could easily have been the year of arrival in North Carolina instead of this United States.

The Hedrick brothers seemed to have given their children the same names and this often added to the confusion. It is quite possible he meant an Anna Hedrick who was 104 years old in 1835 who was married to an Adam Hedrick and confused this Adam with his great-grandfather. This Anna would have been 10 years older than his great-grandfather.

There were several spellings of the name Hedrick. The German spellings were Hetrick and Heydrick. The English in North Carolina Anglicized the spelling to Hedrick and Headrick. German records used one spelling. English records another.

Much of the information used here comes from "Centennial History of Davidson County" by Rev. Jacob Calven Leonard, published in 1927 by Raleigh, Edwards, Broughton in the LDS geneology library.

The early Hedricks settled in what was Rowan County, North Carolina. Its name was later changed to Davidson Country, North Carolina.

Peter Hedrick 1 (married Milla)

Peter Hedrick 1 came from Palatingte in Germany. Arrived Philadelphia on Sept. 11, 1738 on the ship "Robert and Oliver" under Captain Walter Goodman.

He settled in Lancaster County, Penn. Had two known sons, Peter II and Adam. Peter II was born Dec. 17, 1733, which means he was about four years old when he arrived in this country. Adam was born Oct. 12, 1741. The difference in ages suggests the possiblity of other children. This gives credence to story that the original Hedrick had seven sons who fought in the Revolutionary War.

A grandson of Peter II by the name of Commodore kept a family Bible mentioned numerous times in a "History of the Briggs of North Carolina", contained in the LDS geneology library. This Bible could perhaps contain information about the brothers and sisters of Peter II and Adam or the original Peter and Milla.

Peter II with his brother Adam, immigrated to Silver Hill Township, Davidson County (Rowan) sometime between 1755 and 1758, according to the registry of deeds in Salisbury, N.C.

He was a captain in the Revolutionary Army and suffered hardship. While away on military duty, the British and Tories threatened his family, burned his buildings and carried away his property. Several books have been written about him.

Children:

Peter III: Born: June 1761; Married twice:

1) Barbara Meyers

2) Prudence Grist; One child.

Jacob: married twice; 16 children

George: Born March 3, 1762; nine children.

Francis: Married Margaret; two children.

Elizabeth: Nothing known.

Adam: Eight children.

The Will of Peter II's Wife, Margaret

"Last will and Testament of Margaret Hedrick, Widow of Peter Hedrick, the Revolutionary Patriot; made July 7, 1800, Record in Book E, page 113, in the Rowan County Court house.

"In the name of God, Amen! I Margaret Hedrick, widow and relict of Peter Hedrick, deceased, being sick and weak in body but of perfect mind and memory, calling to mind the frailty of nature, do make and ordain this my last will and testament, in manner and form following:

"Item. I give and bequeath to my daughter, Elizabeth Hedrick, my bed and furniture and all my wearing apparel, and one heifer, and one sow, and her wheel where (which) she is accustomed to spin on; and the rest of my estate, after paying my son George Hedrick a sum of money which he has paid me, I desire should be equally divided between my three youngest children, to wit, Francis, Elizabeth and Adam Hedrick.

"I also constitute, make and ordain and appoint Jacob Hedrick Executor of this my last will and testament to see this my last will and testament executed in an ample manner, and further to see to give the above named children so much schooling as may be requisite.

"I witness whereoff I have hereunto set my hand and seal this the 17th day of July, 1800."

Adam Hedrick

Adam Hedrick

Born: Oct. 12, 1741, Lancaster County, Penn.

Died: 1815 in Rowan County, N.C.

Married: Barbara Hege on Jan. 30, 1769.

Buried at Reformed Congregation of Pilgrim Church, also known as Leonards Reformed Church. Church records show the dates of marriage as well as the childrens' births or baptisms.

Adam immigrated with his older brother Peter 11 to Davidson (Rowan) County N.C. about 1755-58. He is listed in the Registry of Deeds at Salisbury N.C. as a land holder 1761-78 along others, including Peter II, the Lopps and Synders and Daniel Boone.

Pension and official records show Adam also fought in the Revolutionary War. Reverend and historian J.C. Leonards states "he was (a) prominent citizen of upper Rowan County and leading member of the Reformed Congregation of Pilgrim Church.

Children:

Anna Marie: Born Sept. 28, 1770.

*George: Born Aug. 16, 1772 in North Carolina. Died Nov.

The following is copied from Adam's tombstone at the Reformed Congregation of Pilgrim in Davidson County in N.C.

"Wie wohl ist meinem leib
Nach ausgestandnem leiden;
Wie wohl ist meiner weel
In jenen Himmelsfreuden."
1815

translated:

"How well is my body
After enduring sufferings;
How happy is my soul
In Heaven's blessings."

North Carolina. Married Phoebe Barrier.

Christine: Married Jno. (sic) Myers.

Susannah: Married Jacob Grubb.

Barbara: Married Henry Fry.

Mary or possibly Amelia: Married William Schoaf. Went to Tennessee

Katherine: Married Conrad Gruff.

This information was contained in records of the Reformed Church of the Pilgrim in Davidson County, N.C.

When ^{? George} Adam died his sons, Adam and George made belts from hides that they had themselves tanned and then rode horseback back to North Carolina to claim their part of the estate. From West Salem to Rowan County was quite a distance to ride horseback. It is assumed that they brought back cash in their money belts.

Adam, George and others saved their money until they had $50. Then they rode horseback to Vincennes, Indiana to the Federal Land Office where they purchased an additional 40 acres. They raised the $50 from hides and hogs. They dressed hogs, shipped them or took them via wagon to Evansville, Ind., where they sold at $2 to $2.50 per hundred pounds. They were then shipped via flat boat to New Orleans and hence across the sea to London.

David Hedrick's obituary

"David Hedrick was born in Davidson Co., N.C. From thence his parents together with a colony of neighbors, started westward in the Spring of 1827 in search of more fruitful country. After the long journey over the Allehenies (sic) they crossed the Ohio to southern Indiana where they remained a year, and in the fall of 1828 they continued their journey, settling on what is now mill Prairie, Edwards County, Ill., where a home was hewn out of the wilderness. The substantial, old fashioned house is still one of the landmarks in that part of the country. He was the eldest of eleven children, four of whom survive him (i.e. the three sisters, Mary, Susan, Mariah and a brother Henderson.

Henderson Hedrick
by
His Daughter Della May Hedrick
September 1954

Henderson Hedrick was born April 21, 1837 near West Salem, Illinois, the youngest son of Adam and Susannah (Lopp) Hedrick. He attended the district school until he was seventeen when his father died. After that he studied at home. In 1860, he married Ann Burkett who died a few months later on October 8th of diphtheria. His mother died October 31st of the same year. The following year on October 15th, he enlisted as a volunteer in the Union Army at Benton Barracks at St. Louis. His group was called the Birges Sharpshooters but was later changed to the 14th Missouri Regiment. On December 12th, 1861, his regiment was sent to northern Missouri where they remained until February 6th, 1862. February 9th, they reached Ft. Henry. From there they marched over to Ft. Donalson where they experienced their hardest fighting up to that time. He fought in the following battles: Shiloh, April 6-9. Soon after this battle his regiment was changed to the 66th Illinois. He was in Company I. He was at Corinth on the Tuscumbia River guarding the railroad. From there they started to the Chattanooga but were stopped to rebuild bridges. On January 4th, 1864, he went home on a veteran's furlough and stayed until the 1st of February. However, before he went home, he had enlisted for three more years at Pulaski, Tennessee. He returned to Chattanooga. Also in 1863 he was in a stockade near Corinth.

Then he was in Sherman's "March to the Sea." In the battle at Kennesaw Mountain they laid seige to Atlanta for two or three weeks. The hardest fighting of his division was on July 22, 1864. Savannah surrendered without fighting and thus ended the March to the Sea. Father was discharged in Springfield, Ill. on July 18, 1865.

Since Father grew up close to the Lincoln country, he saw Lincoln several times - the first time was during a Lincoln-Douglas debate at Olney, Illinois. I have always thought he was at the grand review in Washington at the close of the war. I think I remember father telling about seeing Lincoln on a raised platform as the miles of soldiers marched by. He admired Lincoln very much as he did Sherman, Grant and Sheridan. He liked to talk about his army life. Why don't I remember the fun little happenings? Why? Why didn't I take notes? (An interpolation here by Henderson's granddaughter, Marie. I remember his telling about the green army cook, who prepared the rice in the quantity he wanted to serve, not being aware that it would increase in size several times over. After all his kitchen utensils were full, he commanded army blankets to hold it. I also remember his pleasure in singing the army songs. He taught me a simple accompaniment to "Marching Through Georgia." As his later life was all spent in the South, he had great respect and understanding of the feelings of those about him, and there were very few beyond his own immediate circle who knew he was a G.A.R. My mother's father, Newton Jackson Luther was in the same fight at Ft. Donelson, having also enlisted in Dec. of 1861. He was assigned to the 49th Tennessee Regiment and was taken prisoner in the first engagement. Tho' they fought on opposite sides my two grandfathers were the best of friends.)

Father was always called "Doc" by his relatives and friends in West Salem. This nickname was acquired before he was old enough to go to school. He took charge of a crippled gander and a young man teacher who boarded at his home told his mother that he should be a doctor. The teacher even called him Doc. From that time on, he was "Doc" to everyone except his brother Tice who always called him by his rather long name - Henderson.

Hedrick Family History
By Henry Ward Hedrick
(believed written in the 1950s)

In the archives of the courthouse of Salisbury, N.C. is the record of the marriage on Jan. 25, 1821 of grandfather Adam Hedrick and my grandmother Susannah Lopp. Adam was the son of George Hedrick. Grandfather was twenty-four years old and grandmother was twenty-two years old.

My father, David Hedrick was born Nov. 6, 1821. It was seven years later when the pair took themselves and their children and all their earthly possessions, bound for the Northwest Territory where land could be had for $1.25 per acre. (1827). Grandfather Hedrick's caravan consisted of twenty-one large canvas topped wagons drawn by six-horse teams, managed by a "jerk line" on each leading pair of horses. It seems Grandfather was well equipped with money and goods indicative of family thrift. In the caravan were Hedricks, Lopps, Tietzes, Clodfelters, Hinkles, Riechs, Walsers, and other neighbors. They all traveled together to Ohio.

The first winter was spent in what is now southern Ohio across the Ohio River from what is now Covington, Kentucky. Here they threw up a log cabin camp. From here some went to Indiana and some remained in Ohio. In the spring they resumed their journey arriving in June 1829 in what is now Edwards County, Illinois, near what was later known as Mill's Prairie. Grandfather entered 640 acres of land and proceeded to make a farm of it, erecting substantial buildings. The house was still standing and in good repair in the 1920s when my cousin Ira G. Hedrick visited it.

In grandfather's caravan from North Carolina was George, a younger brother of grandfather and his family, a wife and three boys: Addison, Gideon and Lafayette. I remember great uncle George who often visited us at West Salem. He settled north of West Salem toward Parkersburg, and his sons had farms in that neighborhood when I first remember. I have an excellent daguerreotype of Uncle George now.

I will now digress to give you an idea of the life these folks led in the day following 1829.

The country was well timbered along watercourses. Oaks of four varieties, hickory, walnut, yellow poplar, gums, elm, sassafras, sycamore, persimmon, ash, and others I can't recall.

Antelope, deer, panther, timber wolves were plentiful. Wild turkey, prairie chickens, quail, rabbits, squirrel of a variety; of course catfish, perch, buffalo in streams. Fruit and nuts were in fields and woods. Of fruits there were three varieties of wild grapes, goose plums, pawpaws, haws, wild strawberries, blackberries, dewberries, ect. Acorns were food for game as were some of the fruits mentioned.

The summers were hot with occasional thunderstorms. Winters were severe with temperatures as low as 25 degrees below zero and plenty of ice and snow. The times of year I loved best were Spring and Fall.

These folk were very much dependant upon their own industries as to how they fared. They broke the prairie to plant corn, wheat, potatoes, sweet potatoes, garden vegetables, sorghum to make molasses, field pumpkins ect.

They went to the woods for fence rails from easily splitting white oak and walnut trees. They hewed timbers and whip-sawed boards from these materials. While menfolk performed these tasks the women of the family kept house; reared the children; spun; wove; and made clothes for all, washed, made soap and cooked. They gathered dried and preserved wild fruits for use in winter.

The men in winter tanned leather, and made shoes for all. They had their social life too and with Moravian services life was not too dull.

Hedrick Family History
By Henry Ward Hedrick
(believed written in the 1950s)

My father, David Hedrick was naturally a mechanic and when he was about twenty-four years old he constructed two flat boats of about fifty ton capacity on Bonpas Creek, a tributary of the Wabash. This creek was just east of grandfather's land. These boats were made of goodwhite oak, calked in seams, launched into the water, and were loaded with corn, home cured pork, sorghum molasses, whisky and other produce from grandfather's farm and the neighbors. Father, with a crew to skull and steer these craft floated down the Wabash into the Ohio and down the Mississippi to New Orleans, Louisiana where he sold both cargoes and boats, returning by steamboat to St. Louis and then home by stage. This in the years just preceding the Mexican War which was in '48.

Father constructed a number of early day mansions in this section. He was married in 1846 when he was twenty-five years old to a lady by the name of Annie. E. Gates. They had a son, Solomon, and a daughter, Hannah. Solomon I never saw until I was eight, when he came to visit. He lived in Indiana.

Hannah grew up and married David Reeves at Ingraham after he returned from the war in 1865. I think they were married in 1868. They took themselves and two small girls and went to Washington Territory going to where an uncle of Davide Reeves lived near Porter Creek in Chehalis County now Grays Harbor County, Wash.

They wrote such encouraging things about this country that sister Irene and our father decided to go there. Hannah died at Porter, Washington in 1935 at the age of eighty-four, born 1851.

When the war clouds gathered in '61 Uncle Doc (Henderson) and Uncle Jacob answered the first call to arms and served until 1865. My father was exempt from service and just previous to the war had gone to Ingraham to construct a store building and residence for a friend by the name of Osman Pixley, who went into the General Merchandise business there and continued it as long as he lived. It was here that father, then a widower, met my mother, Elizabeth Page. They were married Feb. 25, 1858

My oldest sister, Irene Miriam was born at Ingraham on Jan. 4, 1861 (d. Mar. 21, 1950) My second older sister, Arabella Marie was born Feb. 3, 1864. Sometime soon after this my father moved to West Salem and bought a block of land and built the only home I knew until 1889, when it was sold. While living there until Irene was thirteen and Arabella was ten, I arrived Dec. 14, 1873. My parents and Uncle Doc's were near neighbors in West Salem so that cousins of the two families enjoyed each others society until 1882 when Uncle Doc sold and went to Arkansas. On Oct. 3, 1873 my brother Lyman was born.

In the late summer of 1888 father and sister Irene left for Centralia, Washington, arriving at Porter in time for Irene to get the Porter school where she taught that winter boarding with Hannah's family.

The next Fall she secured a position teaching at Montesano, the county seat, and continued there for nine years after which she married a man Eldon Lambert. (1897).

After mother had sold the old home at West Salem, Ill., she, Lyman and I visited at Uncle Wesley Bryan's on Grandmother's farm a few miles from Ingraham, Illinois.

We three took the train at Clay City, Illinois arriving at Centralia, Wash. in November 1889 in a rushing downpour of rain. As no one met us at the station, mother hired a team with covered express wagon to take our things to Porter. When he got to Oakville the rain let up and just as we got there we met Mr. Zim Witsman and his wife. They had a dead buck deer in their express wagon that Mr. Witsman had killed. They told us that father and David Reeves were at Centralia so they took Mother and Lyman with them to await the coming of father at their farm about three miles above Porter.

The man who brought us took me back to Centralia and located Father and David Reeves as they were getting up from breakfast in a hotel. As soon as I had my breakfast we started for Witsman's from where David took us to his place. The roads throught the green timber were next to impassable and the man who brought us to Oakville drove at a gallop all the way to Centralia. David had a pair of oxen to his wagon. My first experience of this kind (They didn't gallop).

The first year I spent in Washington it became a state (1889). I worked for a contractor building an extension of the N.P Railway from Centralia to Montesano. I earned enough money above my board to buy lumber, nails, and windows for us a six room house. Father finished the roof and did the building and we moved in before bad weather. I was a proud boy. The next year (1890) I started building for Irene a large new house which had three fireplaces, two stories, and was plastered. It was near our house. I laid the foundation, put up the frame roof, the window frames and siding. My father and David Reeves did the interior woodwork. I can't remember when it was finished. It was after Irene was married. Father and Mother moved in with them and they moved our house away to be used for a barn.

Elizabeth Hedrick was born in Randolph county, Indiana, Dec. 14, 1834. When she was 9 years old her parents moved to Pocahontas, Ark., and in the spring of 1852 to Ingraham, Clay Co., Ill. Here she was united with the Christian Church, and in 1858 was married to David Hedrick. They removed to Salem, Edwards Co., in 1869, where they resided till 1888, when the father and eldest daughter came to Washington. Mrs. Hedrick and the boys came in 1889, and they made their home in Elma till the husband died in 1900. Since then she has lived with the children. During the past winter she was with Ward in Aberdeen. Three weeks ago she came to Elma to visit her eldest daughter, Mrs. Lambert, and was taken sick and died on May 29, 1904. She leaves three daughters and two sons.

We, the children of the late Mrs. Elizabeth Hedrick, wish to express our heartfelt thanks to the many kind friends for their kind assistance during her sickness and death.
